Air Men When They Arrive
On June 27 and 28 Here

CONVENTION AT SAME TIME

50,000 Visitors Expected in Richmond During Air Circus; to Be widely Advertised

One hundred airplanes maneuvering the skies above Richmond and aerial antics of the most startling type will make the populace acquire "cricks" in their necks when the flying circus is held in Richmond on June 27 and 28.

Army flyers from Grizzly Field, commercial pilots and mechanics from all over California, amateurs who fly for the thrill that no earth-bound mere men may feel, will be here in dozens.

75-ACRE FLYING FIELD.
The field of 75 acres is taking on the shape and tone of the most modern aviation areas, and prominent markers will be so conspicuously placed so as to be discernable from high altitudes.

Grandstands and bleachers are to be erected and refreshment stands throughout the grounds will afford convenience to the thousands of visitors that the committee is preparing for.

The Richmond Chamber of Commerce is having large cards and other publicity matter distributed over California and will hang up some valuable prizes for the flyers to compete for.

NOTED GUESTS INVITED.
City officials of San Francisco and Oakland State officials and United States Senators will be invited to attend and take part in the opening.

The annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the Department of California-Nevada will hold its sessions at the time of the air meet, and estimates freely are made that there will be 50,000 visitors to Richmond during the two days.

The highways are excellent, and there will be signs pointing the way to the field for motorists.

Machine Wrecked In Mystery Crash

The facts of what appears to be a serious accident at San Pablo and Macdonald avenues, just north of the Santa Fe crossing, is still a mystery, despite a thorough investigation being made by authorities. An automobile, registered in the name of
J. C. Camille, U. S. No. 16, Mare Island, was found totally wrecked a considerable distance north of the railroad tracks. It is believed that if any of the occupants were injured they were rushed to Berkeley or Oakland hospitals. The local owner of the machine is the Acme garage at Vallejo, according to authorities.

FUNERAL IS HELD

At the Wilson and Kratzer chapel yesterday afternoon, services were conducted for 15-year-old Electra
White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
John H. White of El Cerrito, who passed away in a local hospital on Friday. Rev. Frank A. Woten conducted the services and interment was held in Sunset View cemetery.

Deaf Mother Who Was Cured by 9,000 ft. Drop
In Airplane, Son Whose Voice She Now Hears

After having failed in a long search for relief from deafness, Mrs.
Evelyn Menz, made a flight in an airplane at San Francisco. A sudden drop of 9,000 feet restored her hearing and she is now able to hear without artificial aid. She is shown with her son Jack whose voice was the first she had heard without using an ear-trumpet.

1500 WOODMEN ARE INITIATED

About 50 Richmond candidates were numbered among the 1,500 neophytes who were initiated by the Woodmen of the World of the East-bay district at a colorful ceremony held last night at Pinehurst Park.
The candidates from Richmond became members of the local lodge of the order, and were accompanied on their journey by 40 local mem-ceeded the number of members initiated by the Woodmen of the World ceremonial was held in Niles San-yon and 1251 were taken into the order. Last night's mammoth meeting, in which sixty camps participated, conducted its ceremonies by moonlight and bonfires.

Side degrees, and entertainment numbers were also provided, as the following program reveals:

several occasions of late dotting Macdonald avenue and other city streets

This number will insure an ample supply for all merchants who have ordered flags and will leave a few over, which may be obtained by communicating with Wood.

AFFECTION AND CURE

From the outside of the senate, its president sees perhaps more clearly than do the senators themselves, the evil into which this once august body has fallen through abuse of the machinery created with the sole purpose of revolving slowly and ponderously.

But this is an age apart from the era of our forefathers in whose time the customs of the American senate were hardened into rules for its conduct. Since the senate rules became a code, the energetic and businesslike manner of approach and solution of problems has become the mark set on the brow of its nation to set it apart from all others. Conservatism of method has become the inseparable concomitant of American political and economic procedure; but snappy business methods—we even "sell" ideas and appeals now—are the inevitable requirement for the transaction of public as well as private affairs in this Rotary day.

As Temescal was fond of remarking, the wheel turns. Fortune now favors a different sort of inhabitant of the land and converts him into a senator. The statesman with the Jovian head of hair and the dignity as patent and ever exhibited as his frock coat has given way to the chap in a sack suit and a hurry. We will never maintain that the quality of intellect in the senate is higher than it was; it will allow that it is lower. But there are compensations for this loss. As the type of the senate is levelled by the insidious primary and the absurd complaisance of the common people it approaches their own average standard. The very fact of this lowered standard makes it possible for the people to express their will better and swifter through the senate. And the clingers to custom in that body fasten more abalone-like to the rock of their senatorial privilege—their dignity.

General Dawes naturally frets at this state of affairs, but even a less vinful vice-president could not but see the preposterous abuse of good sense that results when a lone senator, wrapping Rule 22 about his manly form, stalls the machinery with a last-minute filibuster. The vice-president said at Birmingham that the people possessed the only weapon capable of winning the fight for reform. He means that he would like to see the candidates for the senate next year committed one way or the other before the election, so that the people might send to the upper house a few more men like Underwood who would help revise those antiquated rules.

As long as the Constitution with its caution and its stability are there to guard those rights that last and are desirably lasting in human affairs, it makes little difference if the senate can be tuned up to a higher rate of speed. Danger of overspeeding has been the chief argument of the Dawes opposition in the senate, when the flowers of oratory and the thorns of senatorial dignity-investiture have been stripped away. The people should not let the peril be magnified. There will always be ways of stopping the application of hasty legislation. The senate need not think that it is the sole repository of safety. If the government requires four-wheel brakes to keep it on the grade, well and good, but reforming the senate rules on the Dawes plan would be like keeping the brake-handle out of the reach of every whimsical kid who may happen to be riding in the senatorial front seat.

DO YOU KNOW?

That 21,000,000 letters went to the Dead Letter Office last year?

That 803,000 parcels did likewise?

That 100,000 letters go into the mail yearly in perfectly blank envelopes?

That $55,000.00 in cash is removed annually from misdirected envelopes?

That $12,000.00 in postage stamps is found in similar fashion?

That $3,000,000.00 in checks, drafts and money orders never reach intended owners?

That Uncle Sam collects $92,000.00 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the Dead Letter Office?

That it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 yearly to look up addresses on misdirected mail?

That 200,000,000 letters are given this service, and that it costs in one city alone $500.00 daily?

And do you know?

That this vast sum could be saved and the Dead Letter Office abolished if each piece of mail carried a return address, and if each parcel were wrapped in stout paper and tied with strong cord?

MORAL: Every man knows his own address if not that of his correspondent. Put it in the upper left hand corner!

The trouble with fox farming is that the critters only yield one crop of fur.

Some men are so easy that they would buy stock in a buggy whip factory.

Americans carry more life insurance than other people and need it oftener.

DRESS

Sleeves Assume An Interesting Importance in Fashion.

APPARENTLY bare arms have lost their glamor. At any rate it is becoming increasingly difficult to find a smartly made frock—not designed for evening—with short sleeves.

To be sure the little gingham or linen frock you buy for duties about your house or your garden still has short sleeves and it is so much more convenient to have short sleeves on a frock of this description that we ought really to take a definite stand against long ones. But for street frock or afternoon frock the long sleeve seems to be the rule. Fashion seems to favor the long slender arm. At any rate a number of the sleeves are made with long, fitted lines, calculated to make the most robust arms seem a little more slender than they would with no sleeves at all. Of course these closely fitted sleeves are not especially comfortable. Once the closely fitted sleeve is in fashion, then surely the dressmakers begin to rob our arms of their freedom.

The sketches show a number of the new sleeves. One at the upper left-hand group of the same material. What makes the sleeves especially interesting is the fact that the trimming is all on the inside. Opposite to this is a sleeve of white chiffon with a cuff of pink roses. A band of pink roses is worn as a bracelet placed high on the upper half of the arm.

In the center of the sketch you may use a clever blue reps coat with a slit in back and sleeves to show the printed silk lining. This is reminiscent of the slashed sleeves worn by the gay courtiers in the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Below this are sleeves of middle age suggestion. A closely fitted black sleeve has white pleating at the wrist. Opposite to it is a sleeve for an evening frock, which is not attached to the frock at all but is kept in place on the arm by means of an elastic embellished with beads.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

By MARY MARSHALL

WHITE SHOES

WHITE shoes will be largely worn with all-white frocks this year. Kid and doekin both are in favor, so you can suit your own particular choice when you are buying shoes.

THE FRINGE

The Dutchess of York rather set the fashion in England for the bang that amounts to a little fringe right across the forehead. French women often have quite heavy bangs, like the sort worn by old-time bisque dolls, enough hair in the fringe to form becoming tendrils. If you like you can have a bang that gives the effect of the little girl who was either very very good or horrid.

WHEN YOU HAVE CORN-BEEF

Select a piece of lean beef well streaked with fat that has been corned only three days. Wipe the meat and the securely in shape. Put in a kettle, cover with cold water and bring slowly to boiling point. Boil five minutes, remove scum and cook at a lower temperature until tender. Cool slightly in water in which it was cooked, remove to a dish, cover and place on cover a flat iron or other weight. Remove when the meat is cold. Serve sliced, with pickles of some sort.

Next day make a salad in this way: Cut cold corned beef into dice and mix with half as much diced celery. Mix well with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce.

The Bread and Butter Wife

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

SALLY LEE has gone to Atlantic City as public stenographer in a fashionable hotel after quarrelling with her husband.

TOM PORTER, her husband of a year, who resents her working even though she does it in order that he may live more comfortably.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXXIX—AMBITIOUS PLANS

WHEN Sally reported to Mr. Granville for work that afternoon she room was strewn with steamship folders and hotel booklets.

"Sit down here," he called to her gaily. "We've got to pick a place to go for the summer. Atlantic City's too crowded. Can't do any work here."

His enthusiasm was infectious and Sally sat down and began eagerly to look through the booklets which seemed to promise an earthly paradise.

"Ever been to the 'White Mountains'?" he asked as though it would be the most natural thing in the world for Sally to have spent her summers there. "Miss Barker was there with me for two summers; she'll tell you there was nothing but work, but I guess she had time for a game of golf now and then. Do you play golf?"

"Oh, no, Mr. Granville; I've never done anything but work."

"Oh, well, as my secretary you'll have your mornings to yourself as long as you work hard afternoons and evenings. Suppose I'll have a hard time keeping a pretty girl like you at work in the evening."

Sally wished that she could tell him that she had no interest in men, but she was afraid to mention Tom. He might not be willing to take her if he knew she was not a widow, but just a bride of a year estranged from her husband.

She took the folder he handed her and exultantly read bits of it aloud. "Oh, they have a salt-water pool every evening and on a clear day you can see the mountain range twenty miles away."

"Humph," said Mr. Granville gruffly. "I've heard all that before. What I'm looking for is quiet and good meals. What do you think of this one?"

To Sally, whose traveling had been restricted to a few trips to upper New York State, the most distant points sounded the most interesting. She caught her breath excitedly as he rambled on:

"Here's a place in the Rocky Mountains that sounds good, but I'm afraid it's too high. Doctor says my heart won't stand a high altitude."

Sally sighed disappointedly. There were dozens of questions she wanted to ask him. She wanted to know where she would stay when he was living in these gorgeous hotels, how she would live on her small salary. He seemed to read her thoughts.

can't reach you. Want anyone who is working for me to be happy and comfortable. Miss Barker always had a room at the same hotel. Then I could always find her when I wanted her. When we got started on my annual report it'll be hard sledding. But afterward I'll give you a few days off to get rested up. You won't get homesick, will you?"

"Oh, no; I haven't any home."

"That's good. Any folks?"

"Just the first one who came down here to visit me last week. The lie trembled on Sally's lips. But wasn't it true in a way? Tom was so remote from her nowadays.

She could hardly wait for Miss Barker to arrive to talk to her about the room with Mr. Granville. How could anyone bear to give up such a marvellous position—the chance of travelling? Mr. Granville had referred vaguely to a trip to Europe in the fall, to the possibility of his opening his house in Palm Beach the following winter. It was all so wonderful, she had to pinch herself to make sure that it was all true, that it was really happening to her.

Everything she had always dreamed of was held out to her now and she tried to crowd the memory of Tom out of her mind and think only of the good things ahead of her. Perhaps—perhaps some miracle would occur that would make it possible for her to have all this and Tom too. She couldn't give up that hope when everything promised to be so glamorous.

"Oh, to be in England now that spring is there," Mr. Granville quoted from a booklet, raising her eyes high. "That's only one side of the story. Spring flowers are all right, but they don't mean life for you. Guess maybe Nantucket is the best place for us. Sea air is bracing."

Sally felt as though she were being carried along on wings when she left him. It seemed as though her luck had turned, as though life was conspiring now to make up to her for all the anguish and loneliness she had suffered.

She would go to Nantucket as Mr. Granville's secretary and find a new life for herself—a life crowded with work, but also with appreciation and comfort and new scenes. She never reckoned with the slide of the case that Miss Barker would show her.

WHERE IT STARTED

SILVER PLATING

The origin of silver plating is ascribed by Horace Walpole to a man in Sheffield, about 1760. He speaks in a letter about "one man having discovered the art of plating copper with silver." Whether his account is correct is doubtful; but there seems to be no other record of the origin of the art.

Telling the whole truth and making it understood never harms anyone. It is half-truths or publishing that which is wholly untrue that does the injury to all alike.

"Men and Women" at The California is Attraction Today

William de Mille's latest Paramount production "Men and Women," which will be today's screen feature in conjunction with the five act vaudeville road show at the California theatre, is a fine domestic drama, laid in New York City. It has to do with a young married couple and their longing for the finer things of life—even though they be beyond their means. Near disaster is the result.

Featured in the leading roles of the production are Richard Dix, Neil Hamilton, Claire Adams and Robert Edeson. Dix is a bank cashier and Miss Adams plays his wife. She craves pretty clothes, Hamilton in the role of Ned Seabury, is assistant to Dix in the bank. He has been gambling in Wall Street with great success. He loves Mrs. Prescott and presents her with valuable gifts, much to the displeasure of the husband.

The upshot of the whole thing is that Dix invests some bank funds in Wall Street and they are wiped out. He faces prison until the wife pleads with the men higher up that she alone is to blame. The husband stabs that she might have nice things, to wear and intended to pay back everything when the "cleaned up" on the market. Her plea saves him and he is given another chance.

"Men and Women" was adapted to the screen by Clara Beranger from the stage play by David Belasco and Henry C. DeWille, father of the Paramount producer-director.

Other features on the same program include "Wild Waves," a Cameo comedy; "Kinograms"; Carl Richards California orchestra, Larry Canelo at the organ.

San Leandro—Garcia Homestead division to be developed and placed on market as subdivision.

Five Big Variety Acts at California Theatre This P. M.

Variety vaudeville, Richard Dix, in "Men and Women", Bell, Vic and Dell, comedy singing, talking and music, will be the leading features on the five act bill offered patrons of the California theatre today and as the motion picture program is of unusual excellence a happy time should be had by all.

Those funny boys, Zeigler and Smith, with songs and story are always a welcome addition on a variety bill. Both have excellent singing voices and a bent for comedy that is commendable.

Dances old and new are presented by Davis and Rogers, a young musical couple with some dainty costumes, pretty stage setting and what is still better, some real talent to display on the thespian stage art.

Brains and strength are the main assets of the DeLong Trio, who feature equilibrium feats pyramid building and many new and original tricks.

The jazz girls, Leonard and Hines with a routine of popular and worth while song hits are dainty singers that always please.

Legionnaires of the Great War! You'll surely enjoy the adventures of "Sonny" in "The Sunshine Trail." "Sonny" comes home from the war, like the recently returned Rhine Army veterans, just four years late. He finds that his sweetheart is wearing the other fellow's engagement ring. He expects that his home town will call out the band and burn fireworks in his honor. But they think he is dead and upon his return throw him into jail, accuse him of robbery, banditry, and a few other crimes, tear his best girl away from him, threaten to shoot him and turn a few other mean tricks. It's a screamingly funny comedy drama is Thomas H. Ince's "The Sunshine Trail" which comes to the Richmond Theatre today.

Other features on the same program include "Sundown Limited," an "Our Gang" comedy; "Kinograms," built like a newspaper.

CHAPTER VI

The dream of dwelling in marble halls burst into glorious reality at Willerton. This originally small village had blossomed almost into a suburb of Covingham—a large industrial town about eight miles away. Nearly everything was manufactured at Covingham, including millionaires.

A secondary accumulation of froth blew into smaller modern houses clustering round the station. These houses possessed geographical names, and their inhabitants formed a slightly lower strata in local society.

During the years 1914-1918 Covingham had basked in an era of unprecedented prosperity. Most of its trades being adaptable for war purposes, their organizers found themselves of too much use to their country to fight for it. Also, the health of many had been undermined by factory life. The war, however, came to Covingham in shortage of food and increase of paper money; therefore touching two tender spots.... But no bombs disturbed its tranquil night; nor was imagination its strongest point.

News of a neighborhood wherein practically everybody belonged to trade might rejoice the heart of a theoretical Socialist—and who is more theoretical? "Fraternity!" he would cry.

Not at all. There is trade and trade. Who would expect the maker of aeroplane parts to feel an equality with the maker of tooth-brushes? The former would be settled in Hayatam Hall and the latter only considering a refusal on Cumberland, just vacant. He was merely "a Covingham fellow" who did not yet know the difference between a cock and hen parsons' sermons are simply ingestible, Leo had declared before their first Sunday at Willerton.

tridged. Hayatam Hall was probably annexing "County" by now—either through marriage or money....

Yet perhaps, in the vast cycles of the cosmic scheme, tooth-brushes and motor bodies are of equal importance; and, paradoxically, of as little. If both failed, day would still follow night, summer winter; men would beget children, and cats kittens.

In the trail of this magnificence—necessary adjuncts though completely overshadowed—staggered a few tags of professionalism. A new doctor set up on the outskirts of Willerton. The original one, after spending years in acquiring a county practice, found himself with a dwindling income. For the new doctor's methods were up to date, like his patients. By the old one and his patients he was considered dangerous. They played a kind of medical "Oranges and Lemons," the younger man, Doctor Dawes, being presumably the orange. He was a bachelor, too, with private means; a fuscious orange.

Two Covingham lawyers hankering after county pursuits were led by the spirit of Willerton. One took a court; the other "Skegness" by the station; and their wives did not visit. Mrs. Bone at the Court owned a second cousin who was married to a baronet. Therefore, of course, she could hardly visit with any one local.... Their husbands entertained vague but dark suspicions concerning each other's tactics; so they only just tipped their hats upon meeting—they did not raise them, nor keep them on and nod instead. A whole world lies in these signs.

A new and very ritualistic church had been built lately between Covingham and Willerton. It raised the Reverend Samuel Murray's hair on end. He viewed with intolerant contempt the young priest, who went about in his cassock. This contempt was returned in full. They never met unless the meeting proved unavoidable.

Therefore it will be seen that professional, though offering thanks for not being as other men were—shopkeepers and manufacturers—was much divided against itself. By mixing freely with trade, however, its pockets were lined.

Gold bridges many gulfs.... All the different strata on the other side of the gulfs liked, in their turn, to cling to the professional tendrils they could clutch.

When a new family came to Willerton, quite a flutter was caused. On the one hand competition arose between the members of Church, Law and Medicine. On the other, a calculation of pros and cons. Halls, courts and granges were not always as stable as they appeared. Care and discrimination were necessary in forming new acquaintances. Would it or would it not be advantageous to know this new family? That was a difficult problem. One could never tell what position it might ultimately annex, storm, or wriggle into. Would the "County" recognize it? County did strange things sometimes. Precipitation was unwise, so was protracted hesitation. For occasionally fools stepped in—and the angels' tread never found a foothold on what would have proved a valuable ladder....

When the Soap Knight who built The Towers retired from parochial councils to Parliament, Henry Wallis emerged from Covingham and took the house. Willerton pricked its ears. What could a rich man under forty want, with such a mansion unless he meant to marry and settle down? The terms were synonymous in local circles, and formed the goal of marketable chickens. These began to trim their feathers, and their mother-hens to cluck gently, with sly pecks at other chickens. But Wallis appeared too busy making money to notice those anxious to spend it for him. In solitary glory he spent a year at The Towers in proof armor that even Mrs. Bolten could not pierce. Most men considered something to the chief of owl; but he offered no confidence. She had become quite sure he possessed a secret trouble, when the blow of his marriage fell. All pecking and clucking ceased, petrified. Later it broke forth again in the heart of a family or the bosom of a friend.

"That's one in the eye for Mrs. Bolten!" clucked Mrs. Hawkes, wife of the big dairy firm in Covingham, and of Willerton Hall. Mr. Hawkes was so insignificant in comparison with the result of his enterprise, that Mrs. Hawkes really seemed more married to the firm than to the owner. People said she practically ran the whole show—including her husband and new country house. She was said to be a most enterprising woman—"could turn a cow's tail into money."

"That's a sell for Mrs. Hawkes!" Mrs. Bolten murmured delightedly. "She was running him for Violet—anybody could see that!"

Violet Hawkes, being very refined, was able to correct her mother over vowel sounds and certain consonants. She was pretty, and was considered delicate—being addicted to catching things easily. During the war she caught influenza, measles and mumps. Now she was busy catching men. Henry Wallis having proved too elusive, she had turned him down to the level of an acquaintance, and was now concentrated upon Doctor Dawes and Arnold Kerry....

The prospect of a wife at The Towers brought the usual delicate problems that, with a rich bachelor, had been stirred over. To what stratum would the household now belong? The bride was rumored to be "well-bred." She was also a friend of the vicar's wife. The status of clergy families is somewhat abnormal in a district where they almost exclusively provide the intellectual note. Besides, provincial County adores its clergy. Would County therefore "take her up"? It had not yet "taken up" Wallis, and a wife surely rose or fell to the rank of her husband. However, along the clerical path, she might reach these coveted portals.... Really the problem this time needed most delicate handling. A first call might be advisable; for a call provided an opening without closing the door upon an exit.

But a check arose to provide yet another problem. Newcomers to a country district are not usually honored by their first call until after they have appeared in church. That proves they are settled, and have unpacked their Sunday clothes—are ready to see and to be seen, in fact. It also sets a seal upon their respectability. The bride for whom all eyes were searching, failed to set that seal. Sunday after Sunday passed.... At last Mrs. Murray was approached. She was apologetic but unconvincing. Mrs. Wallis had been away so much with her husband.... his business....

That word "business" was a synonym for "Holy" in the ears of local wives. It was all-embracing. Very embracing indeed, for some of the husbands—but that is neither here nor there.... It struck the right note. Sympathy for a new wife whose sense of duty thus debarred her from showing off her trousseau overcame strict convention. Bits of pastebord slowly accumulated in the big hall of The Towers. Perhaps curiosity proved an equal motive; but it remained unsatisfied.

"Sam's sermons are simply indigestible!" Leo had declared before their first Sunday at Willerton; "and Susie will be hurt if I don't rave about them. For heaven's sake let's go to the sea or to a river each week-end, while this ripping weather lasts. You need fresh air, Harry, and it will keep up the honeymoon feeling...."

"Harry" could not resist that. "And why should I vegetate here, while you are in London? You need relaxation, Harry. I'll choose some jolly plays, and we'll go to-gether...."

And "Harry" could not resist that, either. He was a man very much newly-married just then.... Mrs. Hawkes' curiosity was the first to be satisfied. She returned from her call, incredulously stamped upon her strung-together face.

"Not a bit of the sort of girl you'd've expected! Henry Wallis to marry!" she declared to Violet, with the extraordinarily useless relief of finding imperfections in a rival. "Her air's red!—downright red! Short, too, and all uptidy. It's not nicely bobbed, with a slide at one side, like those young ladies behind Bolten's counters...."

Violet glanced at her own perfectly waved tresses mirrored in the glass opposite. "What had she got on, mother?"

"My dear! She wasn't in an afternoon dress at all! She was wearing a short skirt and a jumper. And she was playin' golf with that young man who sometimes stays at The Towers—a secretary, isn't he?"

"Goodness!" exclaimed Violet. "He's quite a common sort of man."

"Oh he's not a gentleman, anybody can see. I wonder Henry Wallis allows it, whilst he's away at work."

"Perhaps he doesn't know!"

"Ah!" Mrs. Hawkes nodded, and exchanged a meaning glance with this detested daughter. "I'd never trust red hair far," she murmured, with painful recollection of a "finishing" governess once engaged to complete Violet's incomplete education. Mr. Hawkes had lifted his eyes from cream and butter, allowing them to drift toward that damsel's auburn locks. He had even emerged from his whisky and newspapers, when his wife was "running" a committee meeting somewhere.... The finishing governess never finished, she departed.

"I must go and tell Mrs. Bolten," Mrs. Hawkes remarked, putting on her gloves again.

The very next day Mrs. Kerry called at The Towers. She had not done so before owing to a convenient delicacy of health when problems arose or unpleasantness occurred. Mr. Kerry owned a colliery some five miles away. Very much pleased with the world's treatment of himself, Mrs. Kerry was thin, pale, and looked "nervy." They possessed two sons. Arnold, the elder, followed in father's glided footsteps; Bevington was at Oxford. Bevington had been born with the dawn of affluence, when a "family name" had seemed to give more of an air than an everyday Christian one. The family of Bevington had once kept The Golden Hen near Dudley Port; but that was only a myth now....

Mrs. Kerry found Mrs. Wallis alone, in a grimy oven on her way to the garage. "You've actually asked me to go with her!" the ruffled lady exclaimed afterward, at dinner, gazing upon her husband and son as if to challenge their comprehension of this indignity.

"To the garage? On a first call?" Arnold was a correct young man who liked his surroundings to be well conducted. He was tall and good-looking, with well-combed hair that possessed a suspiciously uniform wave. His clothes were scrupulously correct, and he dressed faultlessly every evening. "Yes; you may well laugh, Tom!"

"What did you do there?" guffawed her husband. "Have tea?"

"No. She pushed a lot of tools off a chair with no back, and asked if I minded her just finishing a dirty little job in her new car. Mr. Wallis gave her a two-seater Wallis-Mills for a wedding present, you know. It was worth eight hundred pounds, I believe! At least, Mrs. Bolten's chauffeur told her his brother—his gardener at The Towers, you know—told him so; but—"

"Go on about the call, mother—we've heard all that dozens of times." Arnold's final manners sometimes failed to equal his others, and the others were often shadows....

Advances in Every Phase of Operation and Ownership

Before a car can attain a success as complete and all-inclusive as the Chrysler Six it must present advances bearing materially on all phases of performance and ownership. No matter how powerful and flexible the engine, no matter how sturdy the construction, no matter how economical the operation—there must also be superior riding qualities and superior appearance.

The Chrysler Six, sweeping aside tradition, offered advances in every one of these particulars. It scored on all counts. No wonder, then, that it won an unprecedented success almost overnight and a victory that is complete.

GODFREY TAKES DECISION OVER JACK RENAULT

My Al Santoro

Staff Correspondent Universal Service
SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—The Ponce de Leon's of the West, seeking a youthful fountain of energy, who may some day be a menace to the health and happiness of William Harrison Dempsey, the gentleman heavyweight champion of the world, will have to seek elsewhere. George Godfrey is not it yet.

With considerable California sun at disposal, to aid and abet the casting of this Black Shadow, Godfrey won a decision over Jack Renault of Canada, but failed to impress the 15,000 or more merry villagers who sat in to watch the contender for Jack Dempsey's title.

But where credit is somewhat due, let it be given. Godfrey did beat Renault without question. The Lone Horseman of Quebec was seldom in the picture and on two occasions the Black Shadow flitted a right hand that unseated him. The knockdown came in the fourth round. The men were in close and Godfrey brought a punch to the stomach that brought the Canadian down. The Canadian mumbled protest to referee Tom Laird, claiming a low punch. This was disallowed and Godfrey charged his feet and had him on the floor again, a right to the jaw bringing Renault down. Before he could take a count the bell ended hostilities.

When some one sounded the alarm for the six round semi-final, Fireman Ralph Smith, 215 pound heavyweight from Hollywood, came charging out of his corner to put Jack O'Dare, the giant Russian, out. A right hook to the jaw put O'Dare down and out in the first round. This was the second time Smith stopped O'Dare, the first time in six, which was believed caused from a lucky punch.

The preliminaries:
George Barach beat Jack Ketchell, four rounds.
Roy Riley got an unearned decision over Dave Au, Chinese bantamweight, four rounds.
Jimmy Byrne won from Fred Sullivan, six rounds.

The lineup's for the two teams follow:

HERE ARE THE MEN RESPONSIBLE FOR DRIVE THAT PUT ATHLETICS IN FRONT

Sanctuary Gray, right-handed pitcher, had won seven straight games at the time this photograph was taken. This is only his second season in the majors. He went to Philadelphia from the Texas league. Eddie Remmel, the knuckle ball artist, had won six consecutive games

He has been the Athletics' mainstay in the box for a number of seasons. Gordon Cochrane, who was obtained last winter from the Portland Coast league club for $50,000 has been catcher. Al Simmons, centerfield playing his second season with Connie Mack, has been a fielding and hitting sensation. "Bing" Miller, outfielder, has also broken up many games with his long wall-ops. "Lefty" Groves, left-handed twirler obtained from Baltimore at a cost of more than $100,000 has been a disappointment thus far but is gradually rounding into form.

"Slim" Harris, right-hander, has been pitching good ball. Max Bishop, second baseman, and Sammy Hale, third baseman, have been among the league's batting leaders. Jimmy Poole, first baseman, was obtained from Portland when Joe Hauser was disabled. He has been hitting well and fielding sensationally.

TUBERCULOSIS OVERCOME
Oakland, Calif.
April 25, 1925.
For about three years I suffered from a bad cough and sore chest. I tried many doctors, all of whom pronounced my case tubercular. My appetite was examined and showed tubercular germs. As I found no improvement from any of the treatments that I took, I decided to give the FONG WAN HERBS a test, as a last resort. After having drunk the herbs for four months, I was a well woman and had gained in weight. A year has elapsed since I began to take the FONG WAN HERBS on April 16, 1924, but today, I am still well and have no sign of my former complaints.

TEMPLARS PLAN BUSY TIME IN MONTH OF JUNE

Richmond Commandery, No. 59, Knights Templar, will hold its annual roll call on the evening of June 10. It was announced yesterday. Louis J. Bruener is given credit for being the originator of this idea and it is proving very popular.

It is hoped that every member of the Richmond Commandery will make a special effort to be present on this occasion to answer to his name, and if it will be impossible to be present any member may write a note to the recorder stating his inability to attend and he will be marked present.

The presence of each member is desired, however, where it can possibly be arranged.

Fred E. Connor, Past Commander of Berkeley Commandery, has been appointed inspector for the Richmond Commandery. The following members have been appointed as escort and triangle guard: Norman Anderson, H. J. Hill, A. Campbell, J. D. Lemond, C. Overaa, J. Walker, J. Miller, J. E. Hill, A. Holman, E. M. Milner, S. T. Gnaga, H. F. Chapman and W. Cooper. They will be expected to be on hand by 7 p. m. sharp for long form opening practice on each meeting night.

A visit to Golden Gate Commandery is planned for Monday evening, June 22. Members, in civilian clothes, are to take the 6:30 p. m. S. P. train from Richmond, and meet at the Asylum Golden Gate Commandery, 2137 Sutter street, San Francisco. Officers of the Oakland Commandery will confer the Order of the Temple. Templars are asked to reserve the evening of Friday, July 17, to attend the Richmond Commandery. A good time is promised. Grand Commander William C. Hassler, who is also an honorary member of Richmond Commandery is confined in the University hospital where he was taken on May 23 for a major operation. He is well on the road to recovery.

Following is the schedule of conferred by Richmond Commandery during the month of June:

1. Wednesday Eve., June 10, 1925. 6:30 p. m. Supper. Opening—Long form, 8:00 p. m. Special Conclave. Uniform—Fatigue. Work—Annual Roll Call.
2. WEDNESDAY EVE., June 24, '25.

New Building

cial band and Grand Master Rittenhouse and staff.

Heading the parade was a detachment of Richmond policemen, led by Chief Dan Cox, who won hands of applause for their military appearance. Companies from several Cantons, the military branch of the Odd Fellows, with their plumed chapeaux in various colors and the Rebekahs dressed in white and banded together with ribbons called forth applause, and the Loyal Sons, the Junior Odd Fellows, designated by the fez decorated in gold, won considerable praise.

Harry Marcus, Inc., who will occupy the lower and mezzanine floors of the building, had an appropriate float in the line of march and several automobiles were in line.

The directors of the Hall Association to whose efforts the Odd Fellows are indebted for the erection of the building are Jess Hitchcock, N. B. Tiller, Wallace Snelgrove, Robert Dorman, J. A. Ferguson, James Wright, J. J. Silva, Mrs. Elzaga, and Mrs. Shay.

At 6 o'clock the Odd Fellows were served with a tasty banquet by the Rebekahs.

A grand ball was held at East Shore park in the evening, the grand march being led by the Grand Officers. Dance music was furnished by the Syncope Six.

THOSE IN CHARGE

Those appointed to receive the guests were Margaret Shea, Joella Bonham, Grace Megenty and Myrtle Cobble.

Wallace Snelgrove, local contractor, is constructing the building. The feature attraction at the ball at East Shore park was Lady Blythe Mervin in her impersonation of the "Mechanical Doll." She won great praises for her difficult work.

Following are the committees in charge: George Stanley, general chairman, Dr. C. L. Abbott, as chairman of the day. Assisting them are: Mrs. Grace Curry, Mesdames J. L. Miller, Edgar, Kitchen, Record, Cobline, Phillips, Cool, Hutton, Pearson, and Grace Megenty. Messrs. J. L. Miller, Rhodes, Hausman, Hooper, Tiller, Snelgrove, Dorman, Wright, J. S. Hitchcock and J. Howard.
